- The best results of disinfecting rooms are obtained by irradiating the upper layers of the air, because the air currents cause the clean air from the upper part to mix with the contaminated air from the lower levels, thus giving a low concentration of bacteria at the breathing level. Practice shows that one 30W lamp should be for one room with a volume of up to 45 m³, and a 60W lamp for a room up to 60 m³, but due to the different resistance of organisms to UV radiation, the duration of exposure of rooms can vary greatly.
